

INTERIORS: Painting Space

led by

JORDAN WOLFSON

The Art School in Sandy Springs, Atlanta GA

May 18 -20, 2012 9am – 4pm

Join Jordan in this three day workshop learning how to create a believable interior space in oils. We will explore the motif of the interior and the relationship of space to solid form: how do you make a room look like a room? Beginning with the development of straightforward color and tonality to create naturalistic light and space we will continue by investigating alternative means of exploration. Students will receive individual instruction within a creative and supportive atmosphere. All levels are welcome.

Jordan Wolfson has taught painting and drawing for over twenty years. He received his M.F.A. from Yale University School of Art. Wolfson has exhibited extensively both in Israel and the United States. His work is represented in countless private and public collections, and has won numerous awards. Wolfson is represented by the DFN Gallery in New York City, Michele Mosko Fine Art in Denver, Rothschild Fine Arts in Tel Aviv, and Artspace Gallery in Jerusalem. He currently teaches privately, and at the Art Students League of Denver. His work can be seen at www.jordanwolfson.com. Jordan lives in Louisville, CO.

Cost is $390 for the three-day workshop. For details and registration please go to www.theartschoolinsandysprings.com or contact Donna Thomas, dthomas555@aol.com. Workshop space is limited to fifteen participants – early registration is encouraged.
